Jermain Book - Jordan Addenda - 1906FRENCH ANCESTRY OF THE JERMAIN (JORDAN) FAMILY

Statement translated from the original French memoranda and notes, transcribed and prepared in France, from authoritative sources, by E. Irenaeus Stevenson, 1897- and first communicated to the family by him.

The story of the Jordans, or to call them as they once were called and still are called in France "Jourdans" and "Jourdains," begins in the antique and richly historic old city of Toulouse, the "Tolosa" of Roman days of dominion over Gaul, and later the capital of Languedoc. Especially as an independent county, often at variance with the sovereign, practically a royal territory and capital by itself, the long line of the Counts of Toulouse is as romantic a chronicle as chivalry affords. The active part taken in the Crusades by the Counts of Toulouse, at one period, is merely a single chapter of their bustling history; and they preserved their autonomy to all purposes, until a late date.

X to XIII Centuries

Count Jourdan de Toulouse (also called "Alphonse Jourdan de Toulouse" and also "Alphonse I of Toulouse" was of Italian descent, more remotely connected with the Giordani. He was in power in Toulouse in 1112, or among the latter group of Toulouse's sovereigns; and succeeded by Raymonds V, VI, and VII, and to adventurous Simon de Montfort (1212-18). From the line of Count Jourdan de Toulouse was descended legitimately a branch of the Jordan blood. This branch presently transferred itself to Western France and to the Sea-coast. And thus became the Jourdan family - at some date probably earlier than the XIII Century, identified with the City of La Rochelle, then a thriving and precious sea-port and center, a strongly Protestant community, and destined to play such a tragic part in France's religious wars.

XIII to XV Centuries

In the year 1455, we find the Jourdans fully identified with the city of La Rochelle. Pierre Jourdan (whom we will call Pierre Jourdain 1), is Mayor of La Rochelle. He died sometime after the year named. We have no particulars of his marriage, or of his family, but there must have been a large descent from him.

XVI Century

Pierre Jourdan 2, of La Rochelle, is a co-elected mayor of La Rochelle, in 1511-1523. He was known as the lord of the estate of Bonnomie. He married a lady of La Rochelle, of high distinction, named Francoise Nicolas. Their son was Pierre Jourdan 3, who will be presently spoken of as being baptized, adopting the Reformed faith. Up to that time, the Jourdan family doubtless had been Catholic.

Francois Jourdan (1) of this same generation with Pierre (3) also was of La Rochelle. He married Marguerite Breton. A son is mentioned as theirs, David Jourdain (2) who was baptized into the Reformed Church in 1569. The two men were probably cousins. Other descendants of their father Francois not stated.

Contemporary with the preceding, was Rene Jourdan, of La Rochelle, in 1517. A surgeon. We have no particulars of his marriage, or children, but a descendant was another David Jourdan, to be called David Jourdan 2; who was a "conseillure du roy," a "counsellor" to King Louis XV, in 1630, and died at Nantes, in August 1671, as will be noted later.

beating and abusing some almost to death in order to force them to reveal where they might have hidden or buried money or valuables. No law but the law of the strongest:- See Coopers Spy of the Neutral Ground. There is now in the family a tea-kettle taken from grand-mother by a skinner named Sniffen. After the war he became, or pretended to be, religious, and brought it back.

About the close of the war, 1783, Selah Mosher, the father of Betty Jordan (as she was most always called at this time), died, and she and her son went to reside in the family of John Griffen, a near neighbor who had known her from childhood. He was a member of a Society of Quakers, a large farmer, and also kept a country store. Her son James grew to be a bright, active boy, a general favorite with all the family, his schoolmates and others, familiarly known as Betty's little Jim. When the country became settled she received letters from the brothers in Nova Scotia, directed to John Jordan, they thinking that he still lived in White Plains. She could only write them the way in which he left, and that she and her friends supposed that he must be dead, or she would have heard from him in some way before this time.

When the new government was firmly established, the land of the Jordans, and all other refugees, was confiscated. Betty Jordan continued to live with her kind friends John and Esther Griffin - helped them to bring up their family of children - was loved as a member by them all, and she and her son were treated and trusted in every way as members of the family.

Eleven years had now passed since the disappearance of her husband. She had about given up all hopes of ever seeing him again, and mourned him as one dead. Still whenever she heard of the return of some refugee from over the sea, or elsewhere, it caused much anxiety of mind, and hope would revive. About this time an incident occurred which very much disturbed the quiet of her life, in fact always after caused her to think he was still living, and for some reason purposely absenting himself from her. It happened in this way. I will relate it as nearly as I can, as she often did to her grand-children when they could gather in her room, and coax "come grand-mother, tell us about old times, about the war, or tell us something about grand-father." As I have said before, John Griffin kept a country store. The storehouse was in the yard, a few yards from the dwelling house. Some thirty years ago, when I was there last, the old building and place had changed but little. Often when John Griffen was away from home, or engaged on the farm, grand-mother with some of the children would attend the store. Even in these days they had what we call drummers, or commercial travelers, only then they rode on horse-back from store to store, with their samples of goods in sample-bags behind, and were called "bagmen." One day when so in charge, she sat knitting by a window that overlooked the public road, an open shed directly opposite in which her son, now about ten years old, and some of the other children were at play, she saw a man ride leisurely up the road, stop and look carefully around, and seeing the children, turned under the shed, dismounted, tied his horse and engaged some time in conversation with her son, (as he told his mother) asked many questions, and soon knew all that he could tell about himself and family. Then, with saddle-bags in his hands, he crossed the road and entered the store. She now saw a black-whiskered man with a fur cap pulled well down over his forehead, and a muffler across his chin which he did not remove while there. He introduced himself as a salesman from a New York store, and wanted to show his goods. She told him he need not, the proprietor was away, and she could not buy. He said his horse wanted a rest, and he would like to sit by the fire a short time, and it would not be any trouble to show her his samples. So he busied himself opening his bags, all the time asking questions about herself, and her boy, who he had seen outside, and the family she lived with. She became very much excited, and as the thoughts of her lost husband were always first, as she expressed it, all at once it flashed across her mind it must be him. She rushed out, and in the house to John Griffen's wife crying "Esther, Esther! come in the store, I think my husband is there. I think John has come back." "Why," Esther says, "Betty thee dont think it is John, does thee?" "Yes, yes, I know it is John." They hurried back to the store. She told him she believed him to be John Jordan. He denied it, said she was mistaken. At last to prove it she asked him if he would turn down the stocking from his right leg - they wore short clothes and long stockings in those days - and if he was, as she believed, her husband, that just below the knee there should be found a large and peculiar birth-mark in the shape of a strawberry: and if it was not there she would be satisfied. But he refused to do so denying that he was the man, bid them good day, mounted his horse and rode away, and they never saw him more. But she was always pretty well convinced in her own mind that it was her husband who had come in that disguise in order to see his abandoned wife and child, thinking he could not be recognized after so long a time. (It seems very singular but is nevertheless true, one of his great-grand-children has the same birth-mark on the same place today.)

When fourteen years old, her son went from her to learn a trade, that of spinning-wheel maker, with a Quaker friend, Richard Underhill. She watched carefully over his welfare, often riding miles on horse-back to visit him and give him good advice. In 1798 James Jordan had served his time, seven years, at his trade, was twenty-one years old; was engaged to be married, and was looking around for a place to settle himself in life.

About this time he was made acquainted with facts which led him to believe that his father was alive, in this way. John Griffen, as I have said, kept a store. He also bought beef and pork of the farmers, and packed and salted it in barrels. Father, now at home for a time, would drive the team with loads of it seven miles to the village and harbor of Sawpits, now Port-Chester, and place it on a coasting vessel to go east for a market. The captain of this vessel was an old inhabitant of White Plains and well acquainted with the circumstances of his father's going away before he was born. The captain told him that on his last trip he had sold his cargo at Sag-Harbor, a town on the east end of Long Island, to a merchant named John Jermain, who furnished supplies for whaling vessels fitted out at that port. That in conversation, when he learned the captain was from White Plains, he had asked many questions about the place, of the people, and if there were any named Jordan. His looks, similarity of names and other little things noticed, and firmly convinced the captain that he had found the long lost John Jordan. He offered to take him there on his next trip, and introduce them to each other.

James Jordan, with the consent of his mother and on the advice of John Griffen, concluded to accept the offer. It was like a voyage to Liverpool at this day. He went to Sag-Harbor to John Jermain's store, asked for a private interview, told who he was, of his mother at home, and that they all believed him to be John Jordan of White Plains, for twenty one years given up as dead, and his own father. He showed much agitation of mind during the recital, and for sometime did not reply, but after a time it seemed as if his conscience obliged him to confess that he was the man, and to give a short account of his life since he went away.

He said upon landing upon the Island he had thought best to change his last name for a time, and had taken that of Jermain as being something like his own. He had quite a large sum of money with him, and the first year of his enforced actions had been spent in wandering from place to place, waiting until it would be safe to return. He at last found himself at Sag-Harbor, his funds running low, and obtained a situation in a store, and being young and fond of society, had formed an acquaintance with Margaret, the daughter of Silvanus Pierson, a respectable citizen of that place, and he had forgotten, or tried to forget the wife he left behind him, and married her under the name of Jermain. That she was entirely ignorant of the true history of his early life, entreated him not to let it be known to her now, as so many years had passed it would be no benefit to either side to make it public.

Father always said, in telling the story in after life, that he could not tell why, unless it was innate feeling of kinship, he was obliged to honor the man he had never seen before, and to agree to all that he proposed. He, at this time, called in his eldest son, Silvanus, then about nineteen years old, an assistant in the store, and gave him the principal facts. He took father to his house near by, and introduced him to his wife and other children as a young man looking for a situation, and as he could not return until the captain was ready, he remained with them three days. He was much pleased with his father's wife, who seemed such a motherly woman, he said, and treated him so well; got acquainted with all the children - his half brothers and sisters - and wrote down their names to bring home. I will give them here:- The boys were Silvanus, Alanson, George and John; the girls were Julia, Caroline, Margaret and Rebecca.

On taking leave to return home, his father expressed much regret for the past. Told him to tell his mother to think as well of him as she could; gave him to understand he did not at this time have much property outside of his business, and presented him with two hundred dollars to help start himself in life. He also told him that when he was able, he would send him more, and at his death, if he left any property, he should share with his other children.

James Jordan returned home and related all he had seen and heard to his mother, and her friends. She listened quietly, and when others expressed loudly their indignation at his conduct, she was willing to find excuses for it as something which under the circumstances he could not well help. And she never in after life liked to hear anything said against him, carefully keeping all the presents and mementoes he had given her in a sacred corner in the old chest I have spoken of, and never seemed to wish to remember him in any other character than that in which he left her, the young lover and husband of those few months of her early youth.

On the 26th of March, 1799, James Jordan was married to Hannah, daughter of Daniel Carpenter, of White Plains, and Leah Baily of Somerstown. They were all members of the Friends Society. Mother was one of a family of twelve children, three brothers and nine sisters. On her marriage day she was a nice pretty girl of eighteen, dressed in a neat plain quaker costume of that day. Father was twenty-one, and wore a three-cornered hat, broad skirted coat, short clothes with silver buckles at the knee, low silver buckled shoes, and long stockings, his hair in a queue behind, tied with a white ribbon. They, with a party of young friends, on horseback rode seven miles to the meeting-house, and were married in the quaker form of that time.

In a few days after, he removed with his wife and mother to a farm of about thirty acres he had purchased sometime before, situated on the Hudson river near the present village of Croton-Landing, then called Colsberg. Father has often told me the place seemed homelike and pleasant the first time he looked at it. Here he built a work-shop: and established his business; connected himself and family with a large number of Friends at that time of the Croton Meeting nearby, and soon became a minister among them; lived a life of quiet industry, and as years passed by had children growing up around him, bought more land, set out orchards, and in a few years got to be a large farmer and fruit-grower.

He frequently corresponded with his uncles Francis and James Jordan, and their children, in Nova Scotia, but not much intercourse with the Jermaines. His half-brothers, George and Alanson, sometimes called to see him. He named one of his children Alanson. When his father, Major John Jermain, as he was called in the latter days of his life, died, he was notified to appear at the business place of Silvanus Jermain, then a prosperous merchant of Albany, to attend at the settlement of his estate. He went up the Hudson river in a sailing-vessel, a sloop, and was told that his father had been a generous open-handed man, with a large family to educate and settle in life, and had not much property. He received his share, and several pieces of calico, and some other goods from the store as a present for his wife and mother.

Elizabeth Jordan, better known as Aunt Betty, and loved by all, lived until the summer, 1836. I stood by her death-bed. Hannah Jordan, as good and kind a mother as children even had, died in 1846. - In 1856, James Jordan, then living at my house, was visited by two grand-sons of his uncle Francis from Nova Scotia. They were fine looking intelligent young men. They related to us all they had heard from their grand-father in regard to breaking up of the Jordan family in the time of the Revolution, and in substance as I have written. The descendants of Francis and his brother James are many at the present time in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and the New England states.

James Jordan was a minister in the Friends Society for more than sixty years, preaching in public meeting on his ninety-first birthday. He died at my house in 1873, age ninety-seven years, leaving an unblemished name as a good citizen, a kind father, and sincere christian, called upon for years by all that needed help and comfort in times of affliction. He was the father of eleven children, ten of them living to have families of their own. I will give their names in order of their birth:- Eliza, John, Edmund, James, Allen, Harriet, Richard, Jane, Mary, Hannah and Alanson. All but three attained the age of over three score and ten. Eliza lived to be ninety-one, and there are three yet living. The Old Homestead bought in 1799 is yet owned and occupied by a member of the family.

The grand-children and great-grand-children of James Jordan are scattered about from Cape Cod to Kansas, California, and South America.

The Jermaines of Long Island have been a remarkable family for enterprise, intelligence, success in life, and for the longevity of its members, most of them living beyond four-score; and the descendants of the daughters, the Prime's, the Porter's, the Spooner's, the Slocum's, distinguished in almost every walk of life as clergymen, educators, editors and authors. Who that ever reads literary books or papers is not familiar with the names of Irenaeus, Edward and William C. Prime. Silvanus P. Jermain died in Albany in 1869, leaving a large fortune. A son, James B. Jermain, a gentleman of high culture and great wealth, is, I think, living there at this time. He has used some of his large means much to the credit of his head and heart by endowing churches and hospitals.

JORDAN - JERMAIN

John Jordan, 1st

John Jordan 1st., (father of Major John Jermain), was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1729. - His grand-father (great-grand-father of Major John Jermain) Ozce Jourdain, and his grand-mother, Elizabeth Coudres, were born in La Rochelle, France; - and he (Ozce Jourdain) fled to Scotland (she having died), at the time of the Huguenot Massacre, in 1685, with his children, some of whom were married and had families of their own.* The father of John Jordan 1st., Jean (John) Jourdain, son of Ozce and Elizabeth (Coudres) Jordain, (the name of his wife is not known), was also born in La Rochelle, France, and emigrated with his father to Edinburgh at the time of the Huguenot Massacre; -but, as we know so little of his family, we commence the genealogy of the Jordan-Jermain families with this John Jordan - born in Edinburgh in 1729 - as "John Jordan 1st." He came to America in 1755; and settled at White Plains, Westchester County, New York. In 1757 he married Mary Ann Daniels, an English lady of Dutch descent, who was born in New York in 1725. In 1776, at the outbreak of the War of the Revolution, he removed with his family (excepting his son John, later called Major John Jermain), to Saint John, Nova Scotia (now New Brunswick); -and died there in 1799. His grave, and the grave of his wife Mary Ann Daniels, are covered by the Cathedral in that City, at this date - 1903.

John Jordan 1st. was apprenticed by an elder brother to a trade he did not like, he went aboard a ship which was captured by the French, and he was taken to France. On the exchange of prisoners in 1755, he was liberated, and came to America, and settled in White Plains, New York. In 1757 he married Mary Ann Daniels, an English lady of Dutch descent, who was born in New York in 1725.

When the War of the Revolution broke out, he was a staunch loyalist. "In the month of July 1776, an English fleet with large numbers of troops on board, entered New York Harbor, defeated the patriot Army on Long Island, and forced them over to New York. At this time the more to weaken the patriot cause, the English General, Lord Howe, sent a proclamation through the country signed in the name of King George, offering large tracts of land in Nova Scotia to all that would leave the states in rebellion. Soon after this, the Jordan's (except John 2nd), with many others, changing as much of their property as they could into gold, moved to Saint John, Nova Scotia (now New Brunswick). In Sabine's History 'Loyalists of the Revolution,' you will find this:- 'Francis and James Jordan, original grantors of land in or near Saint John, Nova Scotia.' "

John Jordan 1st., died in Saint John, New Brunswick, _____ 1799.

Mary Ann (Daniels), wife of John Jordan 1st., died in St. John, New Brunswick, March 5th, 1825 (ninety nine years of age).

Note:- The above information is furnished by Samuel and Ezekiel Jordan, grand-sons of John Jordan 1st., received from Mary Alice Jordan, of Saint John, N.B., 1903; excepting the quotation, which is taken from a booklet entitled "The Jordans of Westchester County, New York," by one of the family: Peekskill, N.Y., 1893.

Jordan, of Sag-Harbor, Long Island, New York, - is an ancient and proud French name of mark in the early history of Southern France and Western France, successively. In fact, if the unsatisfiable genealogist wishes, he can carry the line, old as it is in France, even further back, and trace it to the Italian stock and spelling. For Jordan, of old 'Jourdain' and 'Jourdain' is simply 'Jourdanie' in older Languedoc (South-eastern France) usage, and occasionally in southern Languedoc it is called so today; and originally it means the immigration into Languedoc of the Giordani Familyline from Italy."

Janet

Married

John Jordan 2nd, (later called Major John Jermain), son of John (1st) and Mary Ann (Daniels) Jordan, married Margaret Pierson, at Bridgehampton, Long Island, August 27th, 1781. Margaret (Pierson) wife of Major John Jermain, died at Albany, New York, March 30th, 1833.

James Jordan, son of John (1st) and Mary Ann (Daniels) Jordan, married Judith Brundage, born on the Hudson, N.Y., Dec. 11th, 1767, and came to Saint John, N.B., in 1783, with her father and two or three brothers, and a sister Ann, who married a Mr. Stone. Judith (Brundage), wife of James Jordan, died at Saint John, New Brunswick.

Francis Jordan, son of John (1st) and Mary Ann (Daniels) Jordan, sometime after the advent of the family in Saint John, removed to Portland, Maine, where he married and had children. His wife died, and he married again, and later returned with his second wife to Saint John, N.B., where he died.

Gilbert Jordan, son of John (1st) and Mary Ann (Daniels) Jordan, married Mary Conden at Saint John, N.B., August __, 1795.

Sallie Jordan, daughter of John (1st) and Mary Ann (Daniels) Jordan, married John Marston, at Saint John, N. B. She left Saint John, and was for a time with her brother-in-law in New York, who was said to have been in good circumstances.

Genealogy of Major John and Margaret (Pierson) Jermain.

From Books of the Chronicles of the Porters and the Jermaines,
 By Kate Barclay Porter, Geneva, N.Y., 1862

"Now it came to pass when John (2nd) (Major John Jermain), was a youth, that there was a war in the land, a people struggling to become a nation, a king from afar, even from over the water claiming their allegiance, and the matter could not be settled but by force of arms.

And so it was that the father of this same John, (John Jordan 1st), was a loyalist, and did not adopt the principles of this new country, but fought for his king.

And when the war was fairly upon them, then did the father of John the second say to his wife and children, let us flee to the north, and stay not among them to perish by the sword.

So all who would went with him. And they went to a place called Saint John, which was within the borders of Nova Scotia.

Now the children who went into the north country with their father and their mother were these:- James, and Francis, and Gilbert, and Samuel, and Sallie their sister.

But John second went not with them, for he was minded to join them who sought to free themselves from a foreign power. So they left him, and the family was divided.

Now it came to pass that after a hard struggle, and many battles, and much loss of life, the loyalists were overcome, and the people became an independent nation. And this was called the War of the Revolution."

"The weeks and the months rolled on.

And so it was that the mother of John the federalist longed exceedingly for the absent son. And she wondered wither he went, and where he tarried, but no tidings came; for neither did he know where his mother dwelt.

And it came to pass, that in her anxiety, by night upon her bed, she did dream a dream. And it was like a vision, so distinctly did all things appear before her.

And the dream was this:- She was wandering in search of her son, looking this way and that, and travelling far, but finding him not.

And she knew neither his occupation, nor in what country he dwelt nor even that he was alive at all. So, in her sadness and uncertainty, she went wearily on.

At length she came to an Island, and then on to a place on the Island where her feet were stayed.

And she lifted up her eyes and looked, and the streets, and the buildings, and the stately old trees with their goodly shade were pictured upon her mind as with an artist's pencil.

Section 1

Chapter 10, Section 10.1

Let $f(x) = x^2 + 3x - 4$. Find $f(2)$.

Solution: We substitute $x = 2$ into the function $f(x)$.
 $f(2) = (2)^2 + 3(2) - 4 = 4 + 6 - 4 = 6$.

Let $g(x) = 2x^3 - 5x^2 + 7x - 1$. Find $g(-1)$.

Solution: We substitute $x = -1$ into the function $g(x)$.
 $g(-1) = 2(-1)^3 - 5(-1)^2 + 7(-1) - 1 = -2 - 5 - 7 - 1 = -15$.

Let $h(x) = x^4 - 2x^3 + x^2 - 3x + 5$. Find $h(0)$.

Solution: We substitute $x = 0$ into the function $h(x)$.

Let $k(x) = 4x^2 - 7x + 3$. Find $k(1)$.

Solution: We substitute $x = 1$ into the function $k(x)$.
 $k(1) = 4(1)^2 - 7(1) + 3 = 4 - 7 + 3 = 0$.

Let $m(x) = x^3 + 2x^2 - 5x + 1$. Find $m(2)$.

Solution: We substitute $x = 2$ into the function $m(x)$.
 $m(2) = (2)^3 + 2(2)^2 - 5(2) + 1 = 8 + 8 - 10 + 1 = 7$.

Let $n(x) = 3x^4 - 4x^3 + 2x^2 - 1x + 6$. Find $n(-2)$.

Solution: We substitute $x = -2$ into the function $n(x)$.
 $n(-2) = 3(-2)^4 - 4(-2)^3 + 2(-2)^2 - 1(-2) + 6 = 48 + 32 + 8 + 2 + 6 = 96$.

Let $p(x) = x^5 - 3x^4 + 2x^3 - 7x^2 + 4x - 9$. Find $p(1)$.

Solution: We substitute $x = 1$ into the function $p(x)$.
 $p(1) = (1)^5 - 3(1)^4 + 2(1)^3 - 7(1)^2 + 4(1) - 9 = 1 - 3 + 2 - 7 + 4 - 9 = -12$.

Let $q(x) = 5x^3 - 2x^2 + 8x - 3$. Find $q(0)$.

Then, nearby, a door opened, and her son, in his noble manhood, stood before her. A moment, a glance, and he passed on, and was gone.

But she had seen in his hand the emblem of his occupation, the heavy iron with which to press the finished seams. And he went around the house to heat it by the fire.

Then she awoke from her sleep:- but the image of her son was before her mind, and the place where she had seen him in her dream.

And she pondered in her heart until she thought it a vision, and a token that she might find him.

So she said to her household, 'I have seen the lost one, and I know what he does, and where he dwells, and I go to seek him.'

And she went. On and on did she follow the dim leadings of her dream till it was shadowy land no longer.

The streets, the buildings, the stately old trees with their goodly shade were there. She stayed her footsteps, and stood, and wondered.

She had been guided aright, and lo from the open door came forth her son, and in his hand was the heavy iron with which to press his finished seams.

The dream was fulfilled: - he was there, - and the long parted mother and son met in loving embrace."

From Samuel Jordan, Grand-son of John Jordan 1st.,
Contributed by Mrs. Mary Alice Jordan, Saint John, N.B., 1903

"John and Mary Ann (Daniels) Jordan brought with them to Canada James, Francis, Gilbert, Samuel and Sallie.

John (2nd) joined the federalists in 1776 under General Washington. After the war closed, he married Margaret Pierson, of Sag Harbor, Long Island, where he conducted a merchants store under the name of John Jermain.

His mother dreamed three dreams, at three different times, seeing him in a certain house in New York City; and was so impressed with the dreams that she took a voyage by a sailing vessel from Saint John to New York to find him. Coming to the house in mind, she knocked at the door. The person who opened the door was not her son, but invited her in. Taking a seat at the window while resting, her son passed. She tapped on the pane to draw his attention. He recognized her, came in, and took her to his home in Sag-Harbor, where she spent the winter. Telling her the change in his name, she went under the assumed name during her stay in Sag-Harbor."

Genealogy of Margaret Pierson, wife of Major John Jermain.

Margaret Pierson, wife of Major John Jermain, was born at Sag-Harbor, L.I., March 17th, 1764, and died at Albany, N.Y., March 30th, 1833. The following brief mention is made of her ancestry.

Col. Henry Pierson (1st) came from England and settled at Bridgehampton, town of Southampton, Long Island; and died there November 5th, 1660. His wife's name was Mary, and their children were:-

Henry (2nd); Joseph who married Amy Barnes; Benjamin who removed to Elizabeth, New Jersey; Theodore, and Sarah (born January 20th, 1660).

Note:- "Henry Pierson, the ancestor of the families of this name, now living in the town, came during the first or second year of the settlement. Like all, or nearly all of the first settlers, he was a christian. In his own handwriting (and he was a fine penman, and town clerk for many years), on the Town Records, penned doubtless in a devout frame of mind, is found the following:-

'Jehovah, I upon thee call!
O make thou haste to me,
And hearken thou unto my voyce,
When I do crye to thee.' "

History of Southampton, L. I.
Geo. Rogers Howell, 1866.

Henry Pierson (2nd) was born in 1652, and died at Bridgehampton, Long Island in 1701. His wife's name was Susannah; and their children were:- John, b-1685; David, b-1688; Theophilus, b-1690; *Abraham, b-1693; and Josiah, b-1695.

Note:- *Rev. Abraham Pierson came from Lynn, England, to Southampton, Long Island, in 1639, a few months after the settlement. He removed to Branford, Connecticut, in 1647, resided there about twenty three years, and removed to Newark, New Jersey. He was pastor of the first Presbyterian church in that city. He died August 9th, 1673. His son, Rev. Abraham Pierson, was the first president of Yale College."

History of Southampton, L.I. Geo. Rogers Howell, 1866.

Josiah Pierson, son of Henry Pierson 2nd, was born in 1695, and died Nov. 11th, 1776. He had four wives, and by these had seventeen children, of whom the following are recorded:- Silas, Matthew, Sylvanus, Paul, Timothy, Josiah 2nd, Joseph, Benjamin, John, Martha who married Stephen Jagger; and Susannah who married Daniel Hedges

Sylvanus Pierson, son of Josiah Pierson 1st, was born March 2nd, 1725, and died at Bridgehampton, L.I., August 23rd, 1795. He married Rebecca Lupton, the daughter of David Lupton, of Boston, Mass. Their children were:- Rebecca, Martha, Sally, and Margaret who married John Jermain.

Married

John Jordan 3rd, son of James and Judith (Brundage) Jordan, married Margaret Melock, in Saint John, N. B., in the year 1812. Her father and mother came from New York in 1783 and were married in Saint John, N. B. in 1793. Margaret (Melick) wife of John Jordan (3rd), died Mar. 24th, 1859.

Daniel Jordan, son of James and Judith (Brundage) Jordan, married Isabel Ann Sophia Wilmot, sister of the first Governor of New Brunswick under confederation in the Dominion, at Fredericton, N. B., Oct. 7th, 1826. Isabella Ann Sophia (Wilmot), wife of Daniel Jordan 1st., was born - December 5th, 1807, died January 3rd, 1874.

Mary Jordan, daughter of James and Judith (Brundage) Jordan, married Lewis Burns, (about) Jan. 15th, 1814. He was Sergeant-Major H.M. 8th Kings Regiment.

Ann Stone Jordan, daughter of James and Judith (Brundage) Jordan, married Lewis Burns, (his second wife) about _____ 1826. Lewis Burns died in Saint John, N. B. (about) _____ 1869.

Ezekial Jordan, son of James and Judith (Brundage) Jordan, married Rebecca Frazer at Saint John, N. B., October 5th, 1829.

Francis Gilbert Jordan, son of James and Judith (Brundage) Jordan, married Elizabeth Roberts, an English lady, at Saint John, New Brunswick, January 15th, 1834.

*John Jordan 3rd, was one of His Majesties George IVth, Justices of the Peace for the City and County of Saint John. He was appointed by the Lieutenant Governor, Sir Howard Douglas, Baronet, to solemnize marriage. At this time, 1827, only the clergy of the Church of England, the Church of Scotland, and the Roman Catholic church, could solemnize, and none of these resided outside of the City of Saint John, and so he was called upon to go miles from his home to perform the interesting ceremony. His Certificate, bearing the Seal of Sir Howard Douglas, and signed, "By His Majesty's command Wm. L. Odell," is now in the possession of Mrs. M. Alice Jordan. Saint John, N. B., 1904.

+ Daniel Jordan (1st). About 1814, the "Saint John Savings Bank" was organized by a few leading and benevolent men of the City, for the purpose of encouraging the working classes to invest what they could spare from their earnings, by depositing small sums in such an Institution, at 5% interest. The person in charge failing in his trust, a change was made in 1827, when Daniel Jordan (1st) was made Cashier. As deposits accumulated, investments were made by the President and Cashier, in Provincial and Corporation bonds, at an advanced rate of interest, and, at the end of forty years, the sum of Forty thousand dollars had accumulated, over and above all liabilities; and when all accounts were settled at the time of taking over the Bank by the Government, when the Provinces went into confederation, there was this sum unclaimed, and it was given to the Saint John General Public Hospital. The Dominion Government, however, recognized his faithful services by appointing him the First Assistant Receiver General for this branch, and his brother, Francis G. Jordan (who was an Assistant in the Bank), the First Cashier; thus admitting that they were the right men to fill these important positions.

Saint John, N. B., 1904.

Notes on the ancestry of Mary Hall,
wife of John Jermain Porter

(Made for John Jermain Porter (2nd), Hagerstown, Md.)

Mary Hall was a daughter of Moses Hall of Geneva, N. Y. foundryman and elder in First Presbn. Church. His foundry was at the foot of Castle St. He lived in a brick house on Castle St. where Mary was born and married. Moses came to Geneva from New England. Of his ancestry I know only as follows:

Richard, John and _____ Hall married three Austins.
John Hall and Rachel Austin had children:
Moses, of Geneva, b. 1776
Rachel
John (of Zanesville, O.)
Mary, married Stephen Whitaker 1st
A daughter who married a Burroughs of Geneseo (?)
Catharine, Mar. Amasa Bruin

Moses Hall of Geneva married three times. His first wife was Phebe Burroughs, a cousin I think but am not certain. They had two children, John B. and Harriet Hall Tillman. John B. Hall was in the foundry at Geneva with his father; and later had a foundry at Williamsport, Pa. He was at one time prosperous but did not leave a large estate. He was a rugged man, and your father Jermain G. Porter somewhat resembles him in looks and figure.

Moses Hall's second wife was Mary Whitaker of Penn Yan, N. Y., a daughter of Stephen Whitaker 1st. Children of Moses Hall and Mary Whitaker were:

Jane (Mrs. John Humphrey of Wheatland, Mich.)
Phoebe (Mrs. Nelson Rowley " ")
Rachel (Mrs. Gideon Wells " ")
Stephen (mar. Nancy Graham) Williamsport, Pa.
Henry (mar. Susan Babcock) " "
William died young
Mary (mar. John Jermain Porter)
---- died young
Hetty (mar. Chauncy Ackley, Adrian, Mich.)

Moses Hall's third wife was Phoebe Whitaker, a sister of his second wife. I know of no children.

Stephen Whitaker, 1st came from New Jersey in 1799 and settled in or near Penn Yan, N. Y. He married Mary Hall, daughter of John Hall and Rachel Austin. Their children were:

Jonathon (his descendants still live in and near Penn Yan)
Mary (Mrs. Moses Hall of Geneva)
Deborah (Mrs. Roy of Benton)
Stephen (of Cleveland, O.)
Ruth
Isaac (left a family in Mich.)
Phoebe (Mrs. Moses Hall of Geneva)
Ann

Stephen Whitaker, 2nd of Cleveland, O., became a prosperous hardware merchant there. His grandson, William H. Whitaker of Cleveland, married your Aunt Jessie Porter Whitaker. They had one son who died in infancy.

Above notes are from mem. given me by my father in 1896. There is some confusion as to the order of Moses Hall's three wives, but I think that given is correct. This could be verified from the gravestones of Moses and his wives in the Geneva cemetery. I once copied the inscriptions but have lost them.

Arms. Argent chevron between three Columbines azure, stalked and leaved vert, a mullet of six points or.

Crest. Talbots head erased proper.

Motto. TURPITER DESPERATURE

These arms are derived from the arms of the House of Warwick.

John Hall, son of Richard, born at Basking Ridge, New Jersey, December 6, 1750, died at Geneva, New York, December 4th, 1824. Married Sarah, the daughter of Moses Austin. She died at Geneva, August 1824.

John Hall removed to Sunbury, Pa. and began farming before the Revolutionary War; after the war began they were driven away by the Indians and took refuge in Augusta, Pa. He served as sergeant during the war and when peace was restored he returned with his family to his farm. After 1810 he removed to the vicinity of Geneva, New York.

John Hall served as orderly sergeant and ensign under Captain John Brady in the Pennsylvania Militia in the War of the Revolution. Certificate of service from the Custodian of Public Records, Harrisburg, Pa., shows John Hall and family moved to New Jersey some years previous to the Revolutionary War, that he served during the war with the Pa. Militia and continued a resident of Northumberland County, Pa. History of Lycoming County, Pa., page 111, shows that John Hall served under Capt. John Brady at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War as orderly sergeant.

For the Geneva Courier. 1867
Dea. Moses Hall.

The aged are passing from among us.— We have recently looked our last upon one who sixty-seven years ago came here to reside. Mr. Hall, whom many knew, and all esteemed, was born in 1776, just one month after the Declaration of Independence. His early life was spent near Williamsport, Pa., and in 1800 he settled in Geneva. This was the year in which the Presbyterian Church here was organized. He united with that church in 1811, and in 1814 was elected and ordained to the office of Ruling Elder. Eight children survive him, all members of the same church, of whom six were present at his burial.

During the last few years of his life he again resided in Pennsylvania in the family of his eldest son, John B. Hall, a prominent member and Ruling Elder in the 2d Pres. Church of Williamsport. There, after a brief illness, he was called to his rest, May 6th, in the 91st year of his age.

But his sepulchre is with us. Here, beneath the pulpit where so often he sat at the table of his Lord, we looked upon his familiar face in his last peaceful sleep. Rev. Dr. Wood, pastor of the Church, preached a most appropriate sermon from Job. 5:26. Rev. Wm. Sterling, of Williamsport, followed with remarks, giving interesting incidents in the life of the good man.

Let us cherish his memory. He was a warm friend, a kind husband, a tender father, a devoted christian. Truly has he come to his "grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season."

THE STARRETT FAMILY

The Starretts were a Scotch-Irish family who came to Pennsylvania before the Revolution and were given a grant of land by the King. Some of their descendants live near Adrian, Michigan.

The chart below is based on letters from George Starrett (1842-1922) and Charles Delos Starrett (1874-).

In his letter George Starrett refers to Jane Starrett Runyon as "cousin." This is my reason for supposing that George Washington Starrett who married Amy Stout and James Starrett who married Amy Blue Stout were brothers and that their wives were probably cousins.

THE SNOWDEN FAMILY

The death of Richard Snowden, taken from an old Annapolis paper the first month and twenty-seventh day 1763.

"Yesterday morning died at his seat on Patuxent River near his iron works in the seventy-sixth year of his age, the venerable Mr. Richard Snowden, a gentleman universally and deservedly esteemed, who has left a sorrowful widow, numerous offspring, family friends and acquaintances to lament a most tender husband, indulgent parent, kind master and cheerful and agreeable companion. He was of a most benevolent and human disposition, remarkably hospitable to strangers as well as his intimate acquaintances. By a diligent application to the extensive business which he was a long time engaged in he acquired an affluent fortune with a fair, unblemished character, and led the life of a Christian truly worthy of imitation. During his last confinement which was long and tedious, he behaved with great composure and resignation to the divine will and met the King of Terror with the utmost serenity and fortitude of mind. 'Mark the perfect man and behold the upright - for the end of that man is peace.' Psalm 38 Chapter and 37 Verse." Copied by P. T. Snowden of Columbus, Ohio. March 12/58.

Snowden

Copyright, 1909, by Frank Allaben Genealogical Company.

THE American Snowdens claim as a common ancestor Richard, of South River, Maryland, 1679. He was born in Wales, where Mt. Snowden may have given the name to the family. It is also the name of an English town.

In "The Lady of the Lake," the disguised King of Scotland, James V., appears in Loch Katrine's dell, to Ellen of the Isle, as "the Knight of Snowdown, James Fitz-James." In "Marmion," too, Scott brings in the name, as one linked with knightly traditions, and the family is mentioned in Froissart's "Chronicles."

Snowdown is the common form of older times. The name also appears as Snowden, Snowden, Snoden and Snod n.

Richard, of Maryland, is supposed to trace back to a Crusader John Snowden. That four Snowden brothers, of whom Richard was one, were the patriarchs of the tribe in this country, is a family tradition, but their Christian names are not forthcoming, with the one exception.

Richard was the name of the eldest sons of Snowdens for several generations. Members of the family became extensive land owners, and in 1719 10,000 acres, near South River, were in possession of Richard of the second generation. It was called "Robin Hood's Forest," Birmingham Manor House, owned by the Snowdens, generation after generation, for 200 years and more, is said to have been built by the second Richard for his bride, Mary, who maiden surname is not known. The Manor house was in Anne Arundel County, and was standing until a few years ago. Other estates were Snowden Hall, Snow Hill, Avondale, Oak and, Maplegrove, Alnwick, Woodland Hill, Montpeller, Farland, Brightwood and Elmwood. The town of Laurel was also their property, and they were engaged in the iron industry. Prosperous and influential, they lived in much state, and entertained royally.

Richard of the third generation married Eliza, daughter of William and Eliza (Sparrow) Cole, and after her death he took to wife Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Mary Thomas. His children numbered ten—of whom four were sons. One, Richard, married Elizabeth Crowley, of Prince George County, Maryland.

The others married into the families of Hopkins, Cowman, Brooke, Wright and Crabb. Among other families connected with the Snowdens are those of Staber, Rutland, Hall, Bowie, Orma, Nichols, Jenkins, Marshall, Elliott and Tyson, Chew, Bolling and Fairfax are other prominent Southern connections.

Eight daughters—eight beautiful daughters, to give the ladies their due—were among the household possessions of Ann Louisa Snowden and her husband, John Contee. They had also two sons, one of whom, Charles Snowden Contee, married pretty Betty Bolling, while Anna Bolling (presumably Betty's sister) "flung herself away," as her husband was wont to express it, upon Charles's brother, Richard.

Those who favor the tradition that there were four brothers of the first generation say that one made a home in Philadelphia. Perhaps New Jersey was the home of another, for there the family has had its representatives since before the Revolution, and Jonathan Snowden, of New Jersey, in 1777 was aid to General Hand. In 1791 he was "Captain in the Levies." He died in 1824.

Samuel Snowden, born in 1728, son of Richard of the third generation, in 1774 was a member of the Prince George County Committee, to carry into execution the association of the Continental Congress. Curiously enough, his mother and wife had the same name—Elizabeth Thomas. He married the daughter of Philip and Anne (Chew) Thomas Samuel and Elizabeth had nine children.

Major Thomas Snowden was a Captain in the Continental army, and it was he who entertained Washington at his home, Montpeller. The bed in which General Washington slept is still preserved—a treasured relic. Major Thomas married Ann Ridgely. His son, Richard, married, first, Eliza Warfield, and, second, his deceased wife's sister, Louisa Victoria. Ann Louisa Contee was his daughter.

The name Snoughden, without the Christian name, is one of the hundred or more given in the "List of My Acquaintances in Boston." The list was made by Daniel Henshaw.

"Snoughden is a man of very good character, and mine acquaintance." It seems that he was born in Boston about 1702, and became a boat builder. He married Elizabeth Belcher Bass.

This list makes entertaining reading, for example "John Trull, a noted and successful merchant and mine acquaintance;" "Captain Pecher, the tallest and largest sized man I ever saw. Of fair character." Good, bad, indifferent—some with no character at all—were these neighbors of Daniel's. Another reference to the Snowdens in New England is the record of the marriage, March 19, 1738, of William Snowden and Mehitable Stearns, both of Boston.

The Arms blazoned for the Maryland family, which Richard Snowden brought with him to America, are: Argent, on a fesse azure between three escallops gules three mullets azure, pierced of the field.

Crest: A peacock in his pride.

No motto is given with this coat-of-arms, although one is used by some branches of the family. It is "Dum spiro spero"—While I breathe, I hope.

For the family of London the fesse in the coat-of-arms is "wavy." The name in Burke's "Peerage" is spelled indifferently Snowden or Snowdon, in connection with the arms herewith illustrated. For the English line another blazoning also is given. It is: On a mountain vert a horse courant, bridled sable.

The peacock was first used in heraldry, it is said, on account of its beauty and pride of carriage. It is the bird of Juno, and perhaps it was the charge upon the shield of some favored knight at a tourney in reference to his "fair lady Dulcinea of Toboso," whose beauty he thought overshadowed that of other dames. An English knight sometimes swore "by the peacock."

This bird, with outspread wings, or "in its pride," is the insignia of the English Barons of Strickland, Manners and Tyrell, while the Irish Earls of Sefton have a peacock's plume as their crest.

Emily Snowden (Starrett) Porter
written by her son, John Jermain Porter, 2nd. 1939

My mother, Emily Snowden Porter, was born Emily Starrett. Her mother, Amy Stout Starrett, died at her birth (in 1860) and she was adopted by her aunt (her mother's sister), Mrs. Abigail Stout Snowden, then living in Baltimore. Her father, George Washington Starrett, also died while she was quite young.

When she was about nine, the family moved to Washington, D. C. where her uncle, Phillip Thomas Snowden, was employed in the Treasury Department. After his death, Emily worked in the Treasury Department and the aunt took in one or two boarders to help out the family income.

My father, Jermain Gildersleeve Porter, at this time came to Washington to work as a computer in the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. He inquired of his superior, Dr. Schott, the director of the Survey, as to a good boarding place and Dr. Schott, remembering his daughter Minnie's friend Emily and that his neighbors, the Snowdens, wanted a boarder, sent him there. Father then boarded with the Snowdens and in due course of time Cupid did his stuff. Mother was nineteen when she was married.

As a young woman Emily Porter was blonde, vivacious and fun-loving, but also very competent and conscientious. She was a most capable cook and housekeeper and her cooky jar was renowned among the neighborhood children.

She had decidedly artistic instincts and would probably have made a reputation if she had concentrated on one thing and secured adequate training in that line. As it was, she dabbled in almost every branch of artistic endeavor and succeeded in getting a lot of fun out of life for herself and in adding a lot to the happiness of others. In music she played beautifully but by ear only, and sang the same way. In painting she took up first oils, then watercolors and finally settled down to china painting. To this she gave really serious effort and did some excellent work. Many of her pieces are preserved in the families of her children and I well remember the kilns, the first kerosene-fired, a later one charcoal-fired, in which she burned the products of her work.

As I look back on my childhood, I am inclined to think that her greatest talent was for dramatics. She had and still has at this writing, a wonderful memory for poetry and a decided talent for composing humorous verse and dialogue. She has always delighted in producing amateur plays and entertainments.

When she was a young matron and I a small boy, she organized a club for the young people of the neighborhood called the "Beaux Esprit," the members of which were children of high school age. This club under her leadership produced many amateur plays, did some more or less serious literary work and made quite a local reputation for enterprise and ability. It was certainly a fine outlet for the energies and enthusiasms of the young folks. She also taught a Sunday School class for a period of time in the Mount Lookout Methodist Church.

Later on, Emily Porter became interested in the work of the Cincinnati Women's Club, served on its board of directors, as chairman of a standing committee and contributed much to its welfare. In the latter years of her life in Cincinnati she had a very large circle of friends among the best people (from the standpoint of culture) of the city. This was due in part to her own intellectual and social gifts and in part to the increasing reputation and prestige of my father, who in his latter years was the senior professor at the University of Cincinnati and enjoyed an international professional reputation.

After my father's death in 1933, mother continued to live in Cincinnati until the fall of 1938, when she moved to Hagerstown, Maryland, so as to be near her two sons and their families in her declining years.

Cincinnati TIMES STAR

May - 1922.

Mrs. W. F. Cochran presided at a charming luncheon party at the Cincinnati Woman's club, on Wednesday, when covers were laid for seventy-five. The guest of honor was Mrs. Jermain Porter, for the past two years chairman of Home Economics of the club. From a large L table the repast, which was a delicious one, was served. Then came an amusing and jolly list of speakers, called upon in turn by Mrs. Cochran, who assigned topics studied during the two years. As a finale, Mrs. Lewis Perkins stepped forward with a beautiful California hanging basket, filled with yellow and white iris, the gift of the department to Mrs. Porter for her sun room.

Mrs. Fritz Claussen, responding to a toast on "Interior Decorations and Color Schemes, Dyeing and Costuming," wound up her clever speech by presenting Mrs. Porter with a tiny house. Mrs. C. S. Browning spoke on an "Old-Fashioned Love Feast and Experience Meeting," and handed Mrs. Porter a gay dish mop. Mrs. James Wilson Brown talked of the joys of the play, "Help Wanted," and presented Mrs. Porter with a small doll, gaily garbed as a serving maid. Mrs. Harold Talcott talked of the "Valentine Luncheon" with its favorite recipes. Her merry gift to the guest of honor was a cupid waving a valentine box. Mrs. Oscar Onken recalled the "garden meetings" and added a small hoe and rake to the loot of the guest of honor. Mrs. R. J. Condon spoke of the "Fashion" meetings, and added a gaily-gowned doll to the attractions about the place of Mrs. Porter. Mrs. H. Kennon Dunham spoke of the "Bakery" programmes, and her gift was a rolling pin and bakery set. Mrs. Cochran then talked a little of the "Kitchen Aid" programmes, and brought forth a jolly mixer. Mrs. Rudolph Tietig came next with a few words on the attention that has been paid to "Dietetics and Emergencies," and promptly offered a gay "emergency kit" at the conclusion of her remarks. Mrs. Lewis Perkins spoke of the "Old-Fashioned Furniture and Old-Fashioned Music" programme, and gave Mrs. Porter a quaint old-time chair. All these miniature gifts created no end of fun, and caused each succeeding toast to be awaited with renewed interest. After the speech-making the guests enjoyed the "glee" programme in the auditorium.

"A motel for homemakers," not so stern, however but that it served to amuse the large audience, was the purpose, as set forth in the prologue by Mrs. Randall J. Condon, of a farce "The Intelligence Office," given at the Cincinnati Woman's club, under the auspices of the home economic department, Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Jermain G. Porter, chairman of the department, was author of the play, and as such, was showered with felicitations shared by the following members, who constituted the cast: Mesdames Silas B. Waters, William J. Graf, R. C. Hefebower, Geo. S. Woodward, Robt. M. Ochiltree, Stanley Matthews, George E. Mills, M. M. Diem, Albert J. Wentworth, Harold Platt Talcott, Dale Ebersole, James Wilson Brown, Clarence Browning, Gordon F. McKim, Wm. A. Bausch, Elijah H. Matthews, Lewis Perkins, George M. Toewater, Misses Florence Wosson, Grace Allen and Mabel Brotherton.

Letter from Emily Snowden Porter to Jermain Gildersleeve Porter

Sept. 13th '84

My Darling Boy-

I have not time to write much of a letter but I must get off some kind of a one tonight. It is a real cool lovely day, fire in the study. Yesterday we went to Geneva, Father, Mother, the children and myself. The aunties were glad to see us and we had a delightful visit. Saw Lulu and her baby, poor little thing, I don't believe it will live.

We left at 6 o'clock and had a pleasant ride until we got nearly home. Then Jenny got skittish and after jumping around awhile upset the carriage down an embankment 2 or 3 feet high. The carriage turned completely over. Father got out from under a wheel, lifted a wheel off dear little Ruth and one off me. No one was hurt but Mother and she was very badly cut and bruised about the face.

Ruth's underlip was cut a little and she had a bruise or two on her face but that was all. How she ever escaped being seriously hurt is a wonder. The wheel was directly on her. John was very plucky, he cried at first then stopped and began to pity all the rest of us. He is the most unselfish child I ever saw. Everyone here says the same.

Father was bruised a little and I have a few scratches and bruises. Mother had the very worst of it. Her face looks awfully. We all crawled on the top of the carriage and sat while Father got a wagon.

Jenny stopped just as soon as the carriage upset. If she had not, I don't know what would have become of us for we were all tangled up in the wheels. You don't know, darling, how thankful I feel that the children escaped so. I don't feel much like riding again. the Doctoer says Mother's hurts are not serious and she will get up all right. It but strengthens my fear of horses. You never can tell what they'll do.

I received your postal this morning. Was so glad to get it. It takes so long a time to hear from C. Dear Jermie, take good care of yourself for me. I have doubts as to whether you can read this at all. My hand shakes for I am nervous today, and Ruth and John are tagging on my skirts.

How I want you, darling. Don't work hard and have as good a time as you can. Ruth fusses and I must stop.

Lots of kisses and love to my own boy from his Emmie

"Edward Doty and Edward Litster, the servants of Mr. Hopkins. Litster, after he was at liberty went to Virginia and ther dyed. But Edward Doty by a second wife hath 7. children and both he and they are living.

Edward Doty along with all other adult male members of the Company signed the Mayflower Compact. He was invited to sign this compact on board the Mayflower after its arrival in Cape Cod Harbor and from this time he was treated to all intents and purposes as one of the company, receiving the same allotment of land and stores as all other single men. From this it would seem as if he had at this time reached his majority, though he probably still owed some service to Stephen Hopkins. It has been assumed, however, inasmuch as he is spoken of as a youth, that he had now reached his 21st year, and this is the only indication that we have of the date of his birth.

From the records it is evident that Edward Doty was an impulsive and hot headed young man. Thatcher's History of Plymouth says:

"Clark's Island (Plymouth harbor) received its name from Clark, the Master's mate of the Mayflower, who first took possession of it Dec. 1, 1620. There is a tradition that Edward Dotey, a young man, attempted to first leap on the island, but was severely checked for his forwardness, that Clark might first land and have the honor of giving his name to the island, which it still retains."

Princes' "Chronological History of New England" published about 1712 gives the following incident as having occurred in 1621:

"The second offence is the first duel fought in New England, upon a challenge of single combat with sword and dagger between Edward Doty and Edward Leister, servants of Mr. Hopkins, both being wounded, the one in the hand, the other in the thigh, they are adjudged by the whole company to have their head and feet tied together, and so to be for twenty-four hours, without meat or drink; which is begun to be inflicted, but within an hour, because of their great pains, at their own and their master's humble request, upon promise of better carriage, they are released by the Governor."

The second offence this is called. The first had been in March previous, when John Billington, "who came on board at London," was charged with "contempt of the Captain's lawful command with opprobrious speeches." He was adjudged to much the same punishment, but "craving pardon and being first offence he is forgiven."

In the spring of 1624 the people requested the Governor to have some land "by continuance and not by yearly lot as before," which request was granted, and to every person was given one acre of land, to them and theirs, as near the town as might be, that they might keep close together for greater defence and safety, and no more till the seven years expired for which all had covenanted together. The tract of land which Edward Doty received in this division is located by Mr. William T. Davis in his "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth," pages 314-316, as having been located on what is now known as Watson's Hill. This land, at his death and the division of his estate, fell to his son Edward Doty, who was drowned in Plymouth harbor 1690. After his death the shares of the other children were bought by his son-in-law, Justice James Warren, from whom title has passed to its present owners.

"The Doty-Doten Family in America" quotes a long list of references to Edward Doty in early Colonial court and other records, and sums up the available information as follows:

The study of these public records and early history of the Colony, taken in connection with the history of the time, the lives of his associates and neighbors, and an inspection of the locality and its surroundings, give the following impression of our ancestor: A tall and well built man, with a strong constitution, a frame well knit together, and arms and limbs evidently used to hard work, active, alert and full of life, with perhaps a surplus of energy; without school education and yet with an active mind and that knowledge that comes quickly to a close observer from experience; of a kind nature and good intentions, but tenacious of his own to an extent at least of demanding his full rights, and obstinate in maintaining them. Probably when he landed, a youth, at Plymouth, he did not possess any of the religious feeling which actuated the leading spirits among the Pilgrims, but came soon to admire the inflexible honesty of their dealings and the industry, integrity and morality of their lives. Perhaps his early associations in the family of the "good John Howland" helped to curb his unruly spirit. At any rate, from this time on his life appears to have been circumspect, and he seems to have given his energies to the proper support of his increasing family, and with much thrift, to the amassing of property and lands. Many of the suits at law which we have noted were evidently brought in no unfriendly spirit, but rather to settle by arbitration disputed claims. If our assumption of his birth in 1599 is correct, he died in his fifty-sixth year, and it is more than probable that the exposure and hardship of the landing and the first Winter, which only his rugged constitution enabled him to withstand, at last shortened his life.

Governor Bradford's statement in the appendix to his history, that in 1650 "Edward Dotey by a second wife hath 7 children and both he and they are living," though unquestionably correct, being written at the time by one familiar with all his neighbors, still furnishes us with the only knowledge that we have that he was twice married, and gives us no clue whatever to his first wife. There is no indication elsewhere in any records that points to this first marriage or to any issue from it.

The entry on the Colony record is:

"6th Jany, 1634-5. Edward Doten and Fayth Clarke wer married."

Faith Clarke was born in 1619, and was at this time but sixteen years of age, was the daughter of Thurston Clarke and Faith, his wife. They came to Plymouth from Ipswich, Suffolk, England, in 1634 in the Francis, he being at that time forty-four years of age. His name is sometimes written Tristram Clarke. Besides their daughter Faith they had two sons, Thurston, Jr., and Henry.

1. EDWARD DOTEY AND FAITH CLARKE had children, all born at Plymouth.

Children:

2. i Edward, b. prob. 1637.
3. ii John, b. 1639-40.
4. iii Thomas, b. prob. 1641.
5. iv Samuel, b. prob. 1643.
6. v Desire, b. 1645
7. vi Elizabeth, b. prob. 1647.
8. vii Isaac, b. Feb. 8, 1648-9.
9. viii Joseph, b. April 30, 1651.
10. ix Mary, b. prob. 1653, of whom nothing is known further than is shown by the settlement of her mother's estate in 1677, at which time she was not m.

9. JOSEPH DOTY, the youngest son and eighth child of Edward Doty and Faith Clarke, was born at Plymouth, Mass., April 30, 1651, his birth being entered on the Colony Record. He was thus, at the death of his father, but four years of age. He doubtless lived with his mother at Plymouth up to about the time of her marriage to John Phillips in 1667, and must have enjoyed a considerable advantage in having the aid and counsel of his brothers, Edward and John, both of whom were now well established householders and prosperous and exemplary citizens.

The Colony records show that in 1672, he was living at Plymouth, and it is probable that he did not remove with his mother and sisters to Marshfield, Mass., but, being at that time sixteen years of age, engaged with his brother John, or some other farmer, and soon commenced life for himself. In his early days he seems to have had no other occupation than that of farmer.

For the next twenty years deeds to and from Joseph Doty are recorded on the County Records in such numbers as show him to have been a very large landholder at Rochester. He was surveyor as well as farmer, and his services were in frequent demand to lay out roads and farms, and to establish boundary lines, both public and private. He thus laid out, in 1697, the main roads of the present towns of Rochester and Wareham. In 1698 he was elected treasurer, of the town of Rochester and re-elected 1700, and in that year, 1700, July 4th, he gave to the town a parcel of land for a "pound," and the year following obligated himself to keep the same in repair; the same to be the property of the town so long as used for that purpose.

May 3, 1731. "Joseph Doty, in his eighty-first year, and John White, in his sixty-seventh year," both of Rochester, appeared before a magistrate to certify certain boundary lines there.

The date of his death is not upon the record, but probably occurred soon after this. It is evident, however, from the entries upon the town records of Rochester, that he was not only one of the largest landholders and one of the wealthiest farmers in the town, but that he was public-spirited and held in the highest esteem and repute by his neighbors and townsmen.

9389. ELLIS DOTY, son Joseph Doty and prob. his 2d wife, Deborah Hatch, b. prob. Sandwich, Mass., 1681; m. prob. at or near Rochester, Mass., a wife, Ellinor, whose family name has not been determined.

Rochester Town Records show:

- 1705. Ellis Doty of Rochester, buys a plot there on the east side of Muddy Creek, from Bethiah Little, widow of Isaac Little.
- 1709. He sold this plot to Nathaniel Winslow.
- 1705. April 23. His "ear marks" are entered.
- 1713. December 25. As noted before, Joseph Doty, Sr., for a nominal consideration conveys to his son, Ellis Doty, both of Rochester, "all my $\frac{1}{2}$ of that part of ye 7th lott of Ceder Swamp, that I have in little Ceder Swamp at Mattapoissett." The deed is witnessed by Peter Blackmer and Joseph Doty, Jr.
- 1717. Ellis Doty, husbandman, of Rochester, sells land there.
- 1721. He buys there.

This is the last entry on the records in which his name appears, nor have we any further information of his life there. The enterprising character of his children and immediate descendants, would indicate force of character, intelligence and ability. He was probably a prosperous farmer at Rochester, but did not live to an advanced age.

Children, b. Rochester

- 9407. v Ellinor, b. Sept. 25, 1715.
- 9408. vi Elijah, b. Jan. 1, 1717-8.

Of John and Joseph Doty, above no satisfactory trace has been found.

9403. EDWARD DOTY, son Elliss Doty and his wife, Ellinor, b. Rochester, Mass., May 7, 1705; m. there Nov. 19, 1726, Mary Andrews, b. there Sept. 24, 1703 dau. Stephen Andrews and his wife, Bethia.

He was a farmer at Rochester, but may have removed later to Hardwick, Mass. No record exists of his death. Tradition reports Mrs. Mary Andrews Doty to have been a wise and intelligent woman, who exerted great influence over her sons, and was greatly respected for her worth and high character.

Children, b. Rochester

- 9430. i Thomas, b. Oct. 25, 1727; is reported to have lived Rochester.

July 14, 1735, son Benjamin Harwood and Bridget Brown. Peter Harwood, m., 1st, Colerain, Mass., June 9, 1759, Margaret Clark, b. July 8, 1740, dau. Mathew Clark and Jaret Bothel; she d. Feb. 16, 1794. Mrs. Mary Harwood was a lady of considerable talent, was greatly respected and beloved by all who knew her and d. lamented by all, Bennington, Oct. 27, 1810. Peter Harwood d. there July 12, 1815.

Zurishaddai Doty was a blacksmith by trade. He served in the French War of 1756 in the same company of which his brother-in-law, Dr. Challis Safford, was surgeon. During the Revolution he was employed by the Government as blacksmith in the army. About the close of the war he removed to Wilmington, Vt. The will of James Alexander of New Perth, Charlotte County, now Salem, Washington County, N. Y., is witnessed by Zurishaddai Doty, July 16, 1783, from which we infer that he lived there at that time, his brother, Theodorus, being also a resident of that town.

The following dates of births of children of Zurishaddai Doty and Mary Warner are taken from Hardwick, Mass., records:

Children, b. Hardwick;

- 9528. i John, b. Sept. 12, 1756.
- 9529. ii Moses, b. July 2, 1758.
- 9530. iii Ezra, b. Sept. 28, 1760.
- 9531. iv Ellis, b. Oct. 20, 1762.
- 9532. v Asa, b. Sept. 9, 1765.
- 9533. vi Jonathan, b. July 27, 1767.
- 9534. vii Molly, b. July 12, 1769; m. _____ Thompson; lived Braintree, Mass. where she d. aged 80; 5 chil.
- 9535. viii Betsey, b. May 23, 1773.
- 9536. ix Horatio Gates, b. Aug. 28, 1779; d. Saratoga Co., N.Y., about 1860, prob. had family.

9530. EZRA DOTY, son Zurishaddai Doty and Mary Warner, b. Hardwick, Mass., Sept. 28, 1760. He was for seven years a Revolutionary soldier. At the close of the war he removed to Wilmington, Vt., where he m., 1st, Jan. 19, 1786, Ann Mellen, b. Framingham, Mass., Aug. 4, 1767, dau. William Mellen. They removed to Bennington, Vt., 1795, and 1796, to Adams, Mass., where he kept a tavern; afterward to N. Bennington, Vt., where he kept a blacksmith shop until 1810. They then removed to Choconut, Pa., where she d., May 26, 1813. He m. 2d, Jan. 30, 1815, Eunice Longworth Bishop, b. April 9, 1772, dau. _____ Longworth, and widow _____ Bishop. They then removed with his son Zuri Shaddai Doty to Lockport, N. Y., where he d. June 24, 1840.

Children:

- 9794. i Asa, b. Wilmington, Vt., Oct. 26, 1786.
- 9795. ii Achsah, b. Wilmington, Oct. 10, 1788.
- 9796. iii Almira, b. Nov. 24, 1790.

- 9798. v Sabra, b. Wilmington, Oct. 17, 1794.
- 9799. vi Nathan, b. Adams, Mass., Aug. 24, 1796; d. 1886.
- 9800. vii Ezra, b. Bennington, Vt., March 8, 1799, d. May 19, 1799.
- 9801. viii Ezra, b. Bennington, April 13, 1800; d. Dec. 25, 1808
- 9802. ix Charles, b. Bennington, Jan. 14, 1803; d. March 5, 1803.
- 9803. x Zuri Shaddai, b. Bennington, July 13, 1804.

9799. NATHAN DOTY, son of Ezra Doty and Anna Mellen, b. Adams, Mass., Aug. 24, 1796; m. Pompey, Onondage Co., N. Y., Feb. 15, 1819, Joanna Faxon, b. Hoosick, Rensselaer Co., N.Y., Oct. 22, 1798, dau. Samuel Faxon and Patty Spooner. He was a farmer, Colon, St. Joseph Co., Mich., but they lived 1879, Chicago, Ill. They celebrated their golden wedding in Conlon, 1869.

The first of these is the fact that the number of cases of disease is not proportional to the number of persons exposed to the disease. This is true of all diseases, but it is particularly true of those which are transmitted by contact with the diseased person. In such cases, the number of cases is determined by the number of persons who come into contact with the diseased person, and not by the number of persons who are exposed to the disease.

The fifth of these is the fact that the number of cases of disease is not proportional to the number of persons who are exposed to the disease. This is true of all diseases, but it is particularly true of those which are transmitted by contact with the diseased person. In such cases, the number of cases is determined by the number of persons who come into contact with the diseased person, and not by the number of persons who are exposed to the disease.

THE FAXON FAMILY

Selected by John Jermain Porter, 2nd from "The History of the Faxon Family" by George L. Faxon, 1880.

THOMAS FAXON,¹ ancestor of the Faxon Family in the United States, born in England about 1601, came to America before 1647 with his wife, Joane, and three children. The earliest record of his family is found at Dedham, Mass., in the marriage of his daughter, Joanna, to Anthony Fisher, Jr., Sept. 7, 1647. His wife, Joane, appears upon the records in a single instance, in 1663, in giving her assent to a deed of an eighth part of Block Island conveyed by Thomas Faxon to John Williams of "Barnaby Streete in Southwarke within ye suburbs of London." The date of her acknowledgement of this deed is June 4, 1663 (Suff. Deeds, 4:54). Her name seems to account for that of her daughter, Joanna. The record of her death is not found, but is between 1663 and 1670; for Thomas was married Sept. 5, 1670 to Mrs. Sarah Savill, widow of William Savill. (Braintree Records.) The maiden name of Mrs. Saville is supposed to have been Jarmill.

Unless Thomas accumulated property very rapidly after his arrival in America, he must have possessed a competence in England, and must have brought a considerable amount with him. His first purchase of land was made May 14, 1656. (Suff. Deeds 35: 184.) The deed is fully published in the Appendix as a specimen of the mode of conveyancing, and as describing with clearness and accuracy the land, of which a part is even now called the "Faxon Meadows." To the present time, after many divisions and subdivisions, it has continued in part in the family possession, and till recently, in the family name. The boundaries are natural and imperishable, and are readily found as we follow the line of the first primitive road which winds around it. It appears that at the date of the deed Thomas occupied the land as a tenant of the owner, Rev. Samuel Haugh of Reading. This tract was situated in the present town of Braintree, and contained 450 acres, according to the deed; but there was little precision in giving the quantity of land in those days, and it must have been much more. The location of it is fully explained in the article on that subject and in the map. The consideration was £270. Here, probably assisted by his sons, he engaged in his usual occupation of farming and stock-raising. His means for this must have been considerable, and the amount of purchase money, £270, was not a small sum for the times.

The papers referred to in the Appendix show that Thomas¹ was quite extensively engaged in farming. It is evident from the inventory of the estate of Thomas that he followed the same occupation; though it does not appear that he owned land at the time of his decease. That they were agriculturists in good circumstances in England is a reasonable conclusion.

That he was a member of the church is evident from the fact that he was permitted to take the freeman's oath in May 6, 1657, and that he was a representative from Braintree in 1669. For either event church membership was, by the laws of the colony, essential. (Mass. Rec. Vol. IV. Part II. p. 420; also Vol. IV. Part I. p. 206). His emigration from England was probably induced in part by religious intolerance, and in part by the encroachments of taxation and oppression in the troubled reign of King Charles I.

If the record of Thomas Faxon does not place him above a respectable mediocrity in wealth and social standing, it gives him a life without reproach, an ability capable of success in worldly affairs, and a character adapted by its worth and quality to secure the esteem of men. He died Nov. 23, 1680.

Children of Thomas and Joane Faxon:

2. Joanna, b. in England; m. Sept. 7, 1647, Anthony Fisher, Jr.
3. Thomas, b. in England; m. April 11, 1653, Deborah Thayer.
4. Richard, b. in England; m. Elizabeth _____.

RICHARD FAXON², b. in England, about 1630, son of Thomas and Joane Faxon, m. Elizabeth _____.

The will of Richard gives us a good idea of his relations with his father. During his lifetime his father had given him land situated on the "North west side of ye Mill brook." He died Dec. 20, 1674. His widow m. Jan. 15, 1675-6, (his third wife,) Caleb Hobart, b. in England, son of Thomas of Hingham, who was son of Edmund Hobart, the original emigrant. She died Aug. 9, 1704, aet. 71. She was therefore b. 1633, and was probably about 21 years of age at time of first marriage.

Children born in Braintree:

13. Elizabeth, b. March 26, 1655; d. April 3, 1673.
14. Mary, b. Sept. 7, 1656; d. Sept. 14, 1657.
15. Mary, b. Dec. 19, 1657; probably did not marry.
16. Sarah, b. March 13, 1659; not mentioned in will of Thomas.³
17. Josiah, b. Sept. 8, 1660; m. Mehitable Adams.
18. Thomas, b. Aug. 2, 1662; m. Mary Blanchard.
19. Lydia, b. Sept. 1, 1663; d. Aug. 2, 1663.
20. Hannah, b. Sept. 1, 1663; probably did not marry.
21. Ebenezer, b. Dec. 15, 1664; d. March 27, 1665.
22. Richard, b. June 21, 1666; probably d. before 1690, date of will of Thomas.⁴
23. John, b. April, 1667; d. April 12, 1668.
24. Joseph, b. Aug. 26, 1669; d. before 1674, date of probate of father's will.
25. Abigail, b. Sept. 18, 1670.

JOSIAH FAXON, (Richard Thomas,) b. in Braintree, Sept. 8, 1660, son of Richard and Elizabeth Faxon, m. Mehitable, (b. March 20, 1665,) dau. of Edward and Lydia Adams of Medfield, Mass. The conditions of the will of Richard² were such that Josiah inherited most of his father's estate, Richard³ dying young, and Thomas³ being provided for by his grandfather, Thomas 1. They were members of the Second Precinct Church. He was one of the selectmen in 1722. He d. 1731. She d. March 1, 1753. His place of residence is shown on the map.

Children born in Braintree:

94. Thomas, b. Feb. 19, 1724; m. Aug. 24, 1749, Joanna Allen.
95. Christopher, b. Nov. 29, 1727; probably died young. Ruth (Priscilla is sometimes called Ruth on the records) chose John Adams, cordwainer, of Braintree, her guardian, Oct. 1, 1731. No choice appears by the other children. Priscilla appears afterwards at Pembroke, Mass., but no record of Christopher is found.

THOMAS FAXON⁵, (Thomas, Josiah, Richard, Thomas,) b. in Braintree, Mass., Feb. 19, 1724, son of Thomas and Ruth (Webb) Faxon, m. Aug. 24, 1749, Joanna Allen b. Jan. 24, 1731-2, in Braintree, Mass., dau. of Abijah and Joanna (Bolter) Allen. She d. in Bennington, Vt., June 19, 1814. He d. in Deerfield, Mass., June, 1792.

In Temple's Ecclesiastical History of Whately we find mentioned "Thomas Faxon of Staddle's Hill." This locality is in the north part of Whately, and was formerly a part of Deerfield; but the people living in that vicinity were in the habit of attending church in Whately, and a number of his family were members of the church there.

Many traditions are still extant of his patriotism during the Revolution, and Mass. Archives show the following instances of service:

Vol. 23: 10. Thomas Faxon was a private in Capt. Joseph Stebbin's company of Col. David Wells' regiment in an expedition in the Northern Department, from September 28 to October 18, 1777.

Vol. 4: 92. Thomas Faxon appears on a muster roll of six months men, for pay belonging to the town of Deerfield, agreeable to a resolution of Court of October 5, 1781. Time of marching, July 29, 1780. Time of discharge, December 15, 1780.

Vol. 35: 213. Thomas Faxon, age 46, light complexion, 5 feet 2 inches, Deerfield, Hampshire county, arrived at Springfield, July 30, appears on the descriptive list of six months men who marched to Springfield with Capt. Greenleaf, July 31, 1780.

There is evidently an error in the age 46 years, given in the last transcript. He was at that time 56 years of age.

Children:

160. Priscilla, b. July 27, 1750; d. November 5, 1820; m. July 20, 1773, Edmund Taylor. No children.

MRS. JOANNA DOTY.

This estimable and well known Christian lady died in Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 16, 1883. Her sadly stricken husband, Mr. Nathan Doty, with whom she had lived in a most affectionate and happy marriage relation for sixty-five years, was with her among the highly esteemed pioneer settlers of this city and county. Her only remaining brother, Mr. Faxon, of Michigan, and her three sisters, Mrs. George Rogers, Mrs. John Rogers and Mrs. Joseph White, are among the best known and most highly respected of the older residents of this city. Four daughters and two sons are left to mourn the loss of a most excellent mother. Among the latter is her oldest son, Mr. J. W. Doty of this city. One son lives in Michigan. One daughter is in Paris, and one, Mrs. Dr. Reynolds, is in Philadelphia, while the remaining two daughters, Mrs. C. C. Howell and Mrs. Stacy Johns are in Iowa. The aged parents were making their home with the last named at the time of the death of Mrs. Doty.

Mrs. Doty was born in Hoosick, Rensselaer county, N. Y., October 22, 1798, and was therefore in her 85th year at the time of her death. She was married February 15, 1819, and after spending some two years in Pennsylvania, came to this city, where the family resided until some fifteen years ago, when they removed to Michigan, and ten years later, to Des Moines, where they have since lived.

While in this city, Mrs. Doty was a most exemplary member of the Baptist Church. The very day that her brother and sisters, together with many friends in this city, were so happily celebrating the golden wedding of her sister, Mrs. John Rogers, she passed through the golden gates to the rich reward of a well spent Christian life.

Edith Frazer Porter (1879-)
 arranged by her husband,
John Jermain Porter, 2nd.

Born in Lockport, N. Y., December 20, 1879. Moved with her family to Cincinnati in 1895. Attended Walnut Hills High School where she was in the same class with me and where I had a grudge against her because she was an excellent Latin scholar while I was just the reverse.

She attended the University of Cincinnati and majored in Chemistry but left to go to work at the end of her second year. It was in the University Chemical laboratory that I became well acquainted with her and as I was then a class ahead of her and was able to help her in her work, my former grudge, based on an inferiority complex, gave way to a masculine feeling of proprietorship.

After leaving the University she worked for several years with the Merrill Chemical Co. and later in the office of Christ Hospital until we were married, June 10, 1908.

My wife was and is a very talented organizer and business woman. This is evidenced by the efficiency with which she runs her household and, more spectacularly, by her success in various war and civic activities as shown in the following clippings. In addition to these, it should be recorded that when my brother was called to military service in 1917, she took over the management of the Porter Chemical Company and ran it successfully during the period, about a year, that he was away.

In later years her activities have centered more particularly in her jobs as treasurer of the Hagerstown Woman's Club and as teacher of the Golden Rule Bible Class of St. Paul's M.E. Church.

In the first job, her Scotch thrift and common sense have acted as a brake on the extravagance of her associates and resulted in the Club getting on a sound financial basis and reducing very materially its outstanding debt.

In the second job, she has built up a reputation as a teacher until her class has a membership of over a hundred young (and some not so young) married women. At this writing, she has taught this class for eighteen years and it is one of the largest as well as the most active class in our large and active church.

UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION
Federal Food Administrator for Maryland
700 Equitable Building, Baltimore

March 23, 1918

Mrs. J. J. Porter
111 Broadway, Hagerstown

Dear Madam:

We take great pleasure in appointing you the official representative of the Federal Food Administrator for Maryland in the congregation of the church of which you are a member.

Two things stand out pre-eminently as being your duty, and in which you can render especial service to our Nation at this time. The first one, is the distribution of the principles of Food Conservation. We are sending you under another enclosure some pamphlets, which you are invited to read, and so acquaint yourself with the purposes of this Campaign. In this country we positively must save WHEAT, SUGAR and MEAT, in order that our own boys in the fighting line and our Allies, can be fed. These pamphlets will be mailed to you from time to time and we should be very glad to send you additional copies which you can distribute to members of your congregation and your friends. We are also sending you some food posters, which we should be glad to have you put up in your church, or parish building, so that the matter can be kept continually before the people.

The second duty is that to prevent profiteering in food stuffs. A fair and reasonable price scale has been established by the Food Administration, and if the storekeepers in your community are not fair in their dealings we want you to report the name and address to us. All reports will be investigated direct from this office and the names of the complainants will not be disclosed without their consent. We may, however, ask you to investigate complaints which come in from your community.

Remember now that we are depending on you to keep alive the spirit of Food Conservation and honest dealing in food stuffs in your community.

Appreciating very much your kindness and willingness to serve, we are

Yours very sincerely,

MARYLAND FOOD ADMINISTRATION

When our boys come back we can raise our flags, parade our streets and receive them with out-stretched hands. We can now boast of being One Hundred Per Cent. American. The women and men who responded to Chairman Cushwa's call to service, served him faithfully. No small credit can be laid to any one worker in this drive. Every member of Chairman Cushwa's Squadron put his or her shoulder to the wheel, and, in many instances, put other interest aside and stood at "attention" all during the campaign.

If any special praise is to be given, the chairman would be obliged to give it to the Women's Division, who, under the direction of Mrs. J. J. Porter, assisted by Mrs. L. Z. Hawbaker, "went strong to the finish." The attainment of $384,750 meant to many of them much sacrifice and days of great service. The Boy Scouts, led by one of our most faithful patriots, Captain George L. Fisher, together with the Victory Girls and Victory Boys, stood by their guns until the last shot was fired Saturday, at 10 P. M., in the Public Square, and when they were assured that the victory was won by Washington County. They, too, deserve to share in the honors of the day.

VICTORY LIBERTY LOAN COMMITTEE

Hagerstown, Md.

June 5, 1919.

Mrs. J. J. Porter,
Hagerstown, Md.

My dear Mrs. Porter:

It is with genuine pleasure I present to you the Distinguished Service Medal awarded by our government in the recent Victory Loan Campaign. If you will present this letter at the Hagerstown Bank they will deliver it to you. I am taking this means of distribution because it is more convenient all around. I know you will fully appreciate the great value of this medal and have your name engraved upon it so that in later years of your life it will recall with great pride that you had a part in the greatest campaign ever conducted in this country; that your patriotic loyalty made possible its great success.

Let me take this opportunity to personally thank you for the able assistance you so cheerfully gave; it was a hard task and only succeeded through the hearty co-operation of the live-wires such as yourself. Assuring you of my high personal regard, believe me.

Very sincerely yours,
In the success of the Victory Loan.

Office of the Secretary

July 31, 1919.

My dear Mrs. Porter:

The service given by the women of the United States to the work of the Liberty Loans has constituted one of the great factors in the winning of the war. To this service, made possible by the earnest, continuous and self-sacrificing labor of the local chairmen, the Treasury Department owes inestimable gratitude; and, although no words of mine will adequately compensate for tasks so well and unselfishly performed, it is my pleasure and privilege, in behalf of the Department, to offer you appreciation of your service as well as congratulation upon the success of your efforts in the crisis of our national life.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) Carter Glass

Problems Of Hagerstown Pointed Out By Speaker To Current Events' Club

What's the matter with Hagerstown?

Municipally patriotic citizens would be inclined to shout, like a group of college boys, "She's all right!"

But like all enthusiastic college-yells, that would be hyperbole. On sober reflection, Hagerstown does have some faults. The most loyal citizen admits it.

Mrs. J. J. Porter, at the meeting yesterday afternoon of the Current Events Club, pointed out some of the biggest files in the amber of Hagerstown's possible perfection. At the same time she gave keen, analytic causes, and practical solutions.

Hagerstown's rapid growth, and virtual division by the railroads into two sections "Hagerstown" and "West Hagerstown" are blamed for unsatisfactory conditions.

In explaining why no remedies have been advanced satisfactorily, no cures effected, Mrs. Porter touched upon a delicate matter, the undercurrent of dissension between the "old residents" and the "new people." Glossed over generally, it is, however, common knowledge that those who have been born and raised in Hagerstown hold a resentful, if not hostile attitude at times to "these new people" coming into town. This sub-surface friction is blamed by Mrs. Porter as one of the reasons for lack of progress in keeping in with Hagerstown's growth.

Pure Water Needed

First among the problems is listed its water supply, and first among its needs Mrs. Porter puts "an adequate supply of pure water. After that come the several items which may be loosely grouped under the heading "City Planning." This includes zoning, recreation centers, street paving parking, market facilities, abolishment of grade crossings and eliminations of slum sections. The milk supply is given an important place, as is also improved school housing. The appointment of a woman probation officer for the Juvenile Court is urged as a need of paramount importance, and a building code enforced by an efficient building inspector is suggested as a method of removing Hagerstown from its undesirable position in point of fire risk.

There are five basic factors, Mrs. Porter said, upon which depends how well the responsibility of the people to the people is discharged: first, ability to vision what is possible in a municipality and a desire to have these benefits; second, the ability to cooperate; third, the ability to delegate authority; fourth, the ability to select right representation; fifth, unwillingness of citizens to spend their own money for what they ought to have.

"Regarding factor one—vision and desire," Mrs. Porter said, "there seems to be a lack of constructive interest in public affairs among the mass of the citizens. There is criticism aplenty but much of it does not turn toward the direction of our second factor, cooperation.

Division of City Hindrance

"The ability to co-operate has been retarded by several conditions. The division of the city by the railroads into two distinct sections acts as a hindrance to unified sentiment on public questions.

"Hagerstown's rapid growth during the last decade and a half has also complicated this factor. The older element is largely of Virginian and Pennsylvania Dutch stock. Both are careful and conservative. Much of the recent influx has been from the South and Middle-West. These have been quick to see needs and impatient to get things done.

"Given on the one side a somewhat broader vision and on the other side a tactful consideration and patience, the combination of forces would be ideal.

"Accepting the statement of one in a position to judge I must say that the ideal has not yet been reached. There is, however, no cause for discouragement since the unifying processes have not as yet been in operation for a very long period.

"The ability to delegate authority—to hold an individual or a group responsible for the carrying out of those things for which they were appointed and to give them full credit therefore—constitutes our third difficult factor.

"The old adage 'too many cooks spoil the broth' was never truer than it is today in connection with municipal business. This is not relieving the rank and file of the people from the duties of citizenship, nor is it depriving them of self-government. Rather it is increasing the duty and responsibility by placing upon each person the obligation to choose the right representations.

"This brings us to the fourth factor and opens various avenues of discussion. But whether the choice is made through the old established method of electing a mayor and council or by the more recently introduced commission or city manager forms of administration, it must be made wisely.

impossible nowadays to secure the consent of the best men to accept public office.

"The objection is raised that it is public office. We often hear it said about our local affairs. Granting that the objection is a valid one, may we not look for the reason in the inability by citizens to delegate authority? Would not the highest type of business man be willing to undertake the administration of the city's business if he could feel that he had the same sporting chance to make a success of it that he has been able to make of his own business? The cry of demagogism has been heard too long against the honest public official who is working unselfishly to help his town. It has been said that the man who never makes mistakes never makes anything else. As long as human judgment is a factor to be reckoned with we cannot hope for 100 per cent administration. In some people's minds one mistake looms so large that the successes are blotted out.

"We have come to the last, the financial factor of our problem. This factor of financing looms large for the sad truth remains that these various city projects require money; and sadder still the fact that this money must come from the reluctant tax payers' pocket; and saddest of all to relate is the fact that usually those who complain the most loudly and hence should be the first to further any constructive effort to improve conditions, are the ones to raise the tax rate bugaboo.

"Our problems are not incapable of solution," Mrs. Porter concluded, "the needed ability and interest are here, perhaps somewhat obscured in some cases. Our basic problems are as old as Pericles and Themistocles, and we have many less obstacles and many more helps than our respected old Greek statesmen."

MRS. RILEY IS RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF WOMEN'S CLUB

Annual Business Meeting Held and Reports for Year
Submitted—Review of Activities Given by President

Mrs. S. B. Riley was re-elected president of the Women's Club at the annual dinner and business meeting of the Board of Directors held last night at the club. Practically the entire membership of the club was represented with the directors acting as hostesses.

Other officers named were: First vice-president, Mrs. Frank S. Lushy; second vice-president, Mrs. J. Alvey Long; third vice-president, Mrs. Perry Prather; treasurer, Mrs. John J. Porter; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Harper Ballentine; secretary, Mrs. J. L. Carnochan. Invocation was pronounced by Mrs. John Spangler Kieffer.

Mrs. John J. Porter, treasurer, presented a most encouraging financial report showing increased revenue during the year. Mrs. Byron Grimes, chairman of the nominating committee reported the following new directors, Mrs. John J. Porter, Mrs. R. Paul Smith, Mrs. C. Merritt Campbell, Mrs. Palmer Tennant, Mrs. J. L. Carnochan and Mrs. William M. Dutton. Directors elected at the meeting were Mrs. William T. Hamilton, Mrs. George White, Mrs. Leo Miller, Miss Isabelle Beckenbaugh and Mrs. Walter Roessner. Miss Louise Porter was the winner of the comfort offered by the Home and Philanthropy section. Minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. C. M. Campbell.

17TH ANNIVERSARY MARKED BY DINNER

1940
Golden Rule Class of St.
Paul's M. E. Church
Marks Event

The seventeenth birthday anniversary of the Golden Rule Bible Class of St. Paul's Methodist Church was observed last evening in the social room of the church with a turkey dinner and program.

Mrs. Frank Hermann, president of the class, presided and presented Mrs. John J. Porter, teacher of the class, with 17 lovely red rosebuds as a symbol of the class members' love and devotion for her during her years of faithful service. Mrs. Porter responded with fitting remarks.

Short talks were made by Rev. J. E. Kemp Horn, pastor of the church, who also pronounced the invocation, and Dr. P. L. Russell, Sunday School superintendent. Group singing, led by Harold H. Mercereau, was enjoyed during the dinner. Mrs. William Hammond was the accompanist.

After dinner the guests were invited upstairs where a program arranged by Mrs. Robert B. Huyett was presented. The entertainment in the form of a radio skit was cleverly staged with Mrs. Mitchell Fockler as the announcer from station F. U. N. Featuring the program was music, quiz, entitled "Battle of Sexes," and monologue with the following taking part: Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Huyett, Dr. and Mrs. M. Wm. Dutton, Paul Reecher, Mrs. H. Monroe Ridgely, George Orrick, Mrs. Roy K. French and Warren Seibert.

The triple birthday motif of the month uniquely prevailed in the favors of a red Valentine topped with a tiny log and red hatchet. Red tapers and flowers completed the attractive table decorations.

Dinner was served to over a hundred guests and friends by the Flora Zeigler Bible Class.
